NEW PUPPYROOM at SPOT

Spring really must be in the air because we have so many new puppies coming to SPOT that we built a new room just for young ones. Pups need special attention and care and they have that in their fully supervised room with toys just for pups, extra love and cuddles, controlled play and socializing.

"A separate supervised area like SPOT's new puppy room is not only essential for early puppy-to-puppy socialization and essential learning, but it also offers a designated area for them during this phase", says Michelle Sevigny, a North Vancouver trainer and owner of DOGSAFE Canine First Aid.

HOT DOGS:

Keeping summer fun and how to protect your dog from heat stroke, sunburn and dehydration. It's 30C out have you checked your dog today?

Did you know that dogs overheat more quickly than humans do? So even if you are comfortable in the heat your dog may not be. Dogs do not sweat like we do, although they cool their bodies by sweating through their pads, their primary method for relieving excess body heat is through panting. Panting exchanges warm air inside their bodies for cooler air outside; however when the outside temperature is the same or higher than the dog's normal body temperature panting will not work to cool down their body. A dog's normal body temperature is about 38.3C to 38.8C, but when his body temperature is above 41.1C it is extremely dangerous and life threatening as the dog has lost its ability to cool itself and it is now life threatening.
